BARBARY COAST CLOSED IN ONE LAST NIGHT OF WILDEST REVELRY

Resort Known Around World Is No More, Through Efforts of San Francisco Women

By ERNEST N. SMITH

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondent] SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2. — "A little piece of hell is gone."

So mused a calloused police officer on a recent midnight as he stood in the center of the "Barbary Coast" and watched the last hours of the "Coast" — for it is no more.

For years this spot in San Francisco was known the world over, ranking in importance to world slummers with certain places in Yokohama, Calcutta and Budapest. But San Francisco people sickened of its foul but interesting reputation, and in response to an ever-growing demand the police finally and forever closed down on the "Coast" by refusing to allow barmaids or girls in places where liquor is sold.

That act killed everything, and the underworld is down and out.

Born out of a desire to furnish a place of amusement for sailors that blew through the Golden Gate on the four winds, the "Barbary Coast" at first was a nest of hovels made into saloons, dance-halls and all that goes with them. It was a place where few San Franciscans went, except to show it off to strangers. Heavy fisted police maintained a semblance of order by brute force, and most of the murders of the town were done in this district.

Thieves and panhandlers hid in the recesses of the "Coast" by day, worked elsewhere at night, and spent their ill-gotten gains freely when they could.

Was Mecca for Tourists. The "Coast" was a wonderful place in a way. It gradually changed. The sailors, improving as a class, drew away somewhat. No longer did whalers, home with a season's winnings, spend helpless weeks of intoxication along the "Coast" until their money was gone. With the thinning out of the whalers and windjammers, the place lost its old trade, so it put on a new front and gradually sought elsewhere for trade.

Of late years no stranger would think of coming to San Francisco without taking in the "Coast," and all it had to offer.

The zenith of its fame came with

SUPREME COURT REFUSES TO GO ON RECORD

Income Tax Funds Probably Will Be Divided According to the New Way

The $170,000 received by the territory from the special income tax up to April 30 and on hand in the treasury at that time will be divided between the board of immigration and the board of agriculture and forestry the former getting one-half of it and the latter one-half. This is the opinion of Attorney General Thayer, following the supreme court's refusal submitted to it by the two departments.

The new law passed by the last legislature, altering the division of the special income tax revenue, taking one-fourth of it away from the board of immigration and giving it to conservation, which is under the board of agriculture, took effect April 30. The attorney general will now instruct Territorial Auditor Fisher that the division of the money on hand from the tax is to be divided according to the new statute's provisions.

The division will not be made under the old law, it is said, and it is possible that when the warrants are actually drawn the board of immigration will bring a formal suit against the auditor or the board of agriculture to check or prevent the payment of the one-fourth which it claims should not go to conservation. This will result in bringing the case before the supreme court in a new form, one on which the court cannot refuse to pass judgment. The dismissal of the present suit was based on the theory that in the form it was presented it raised only a moot point, out of which litigation was unlikely, and therefore not justifying a decision. In other words, the supreme court declines to render a decision merely for the sake of interpreting the law and where it is not likely to prevent or check actual litigation.

George G. Guild, acting president of the Merchants' Association, has extended an invitation to Delegate Kalaniana'ole to address the quarterly meeting of the association, scheduled to meet at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Young Hotel building. The invitation has been accepted by the delegate, and he will speak on the subject "National Legislation Affecting Hawaii."

A middle-aged man found ill in a San Francisco boarding house and taken to the emergency hospital, was found to have $1,270,000 in negotiable bonds and securities sewed in an inside pocket. He was plainly dressed, and had only five cents change in his pocket.

The Princess Olga, third daughter of the Duke of Cumberland, is to marry Prince Morris of Schaumburg-Lippe.

the introduction of the "rag dance," said to have been brought out here for the first time. Anyway, the "Coast" got the credit, and its fame went over the world with the dance.

What an opportunity that was! Garish dance-halls sprang up everywhere. Girls galore made their headquarters there to beseech befuddled strangers to drink, dance and be merry. Many of the big resorts had underground or basement dance-halls, and there in smoke-laden rooms to the loud whang of rag music the life went on.

It couldn't continue of course. Such things never stand still; they must either quit or go on faster and faster. The seum of the Pacific gathered on the "Coast." A few valiant church-people began to fight the plague-spot. The "Coast," however, was so effectively linked with San Francisco's life that it seemed almost impossible to efface it.

Women Win Big Fight

But the fight went on—to victory. The women of the city particularly won out, for they worked hardest. And in the end they not only closed the "Coast" but took it upon themselves to win back the "Coast" girls to a respectable life. They placed all they could in positions of homes and left the dance-hall proprietors high and dry.

So the last night came, and it was one wild revel. For the few remaining hours the lid was off. Thousands of San Franciscans swarmed into the district that night to take a last look in many cases a first and last look at a famous "spot." As midnight approached the revelry was at its height, but the resort owners knew the end was near at hand. Bars were cleared of liquors, everything was removed that might intoxicate, except in those resorts that decided to become nothing but saloons. Bryan's grapejuice was extensively shown, lemonade and pop. It was an idle exhibit, for the "Coast" got its fill that night of what it wanted.

Midnight — the crowds, singing, dancing, swearing, shouting, swept out onto the streets as the doors closed. Curiosity-seekers fled homeward, but the denizens of the district had their last fling by themselves, and wandered up and down and back and forth until the cold winds of a gray dawn drove them to shelter.

"A little piece of hell is gone."

The officer was right.

HONOLULU IS GIVEN PUBLICITY IN BOOK

Further publicity has been assured the Hawaiian Islands in the publication of a book entitled "The Odyssey of the Philippine Commission," prepared by Daniel R. Williams, an attorney of Manila, describing the trip of the Taft commission to the American possession, and containing some of its early work in government-building. En route to Manila, the commission spent four days in Honolulu, the events of which are to be given a prominent place in the book.

In a letter to the Promotion Committee, the author says:

"I feel that you will be interested not only in that portion of the book relating to Honolulu, but also in the description of what was done and is being done by our government in the Philippines. I have instructed the publishers to mail you a copy. My primary purpose in writing the book was to try to give the people in the states some conception of the difficulties encountered by the commission on its arrival in the islands, and of how those difficulties have been overcome and a situation created, of which our people might well be proud. I should be glad to have you do what you can to see that the book is brought to the attention of the people of Honolulu. Our people need to be educated as to the Philippines if we are to escape drastic action on the part of Congress." The book may be seen at the rooms of the Promotion Committee.
